

ABOVE: A SUPERMARKET fun day has raised £500 for a charity supporting people suffering from necrotising fasciitis.

The Co-op store in Framfield Way, Eastbourne, invited the Eastbourne Giants, modern puppet versions of giant figures used in medieval civic processions, to the fundraising day. Staff donned green wigs and manned stalls, a tombola and a raffle.

Branch manager Rachel Cornell and other staff were put into the stocks for the fun day. The proceeds went to the Lee Spark NF Foundation, which provides support for people with necrotising fasciitis, commonly known as flesh-eating bacteria. A friend of the store manager's has suffered from the condition. (e24051)
